GIVE THE GIFT THAT WILL LAST A LIFETIME

Lynn Wetzel, a twenty-five year resident, offers piano lessons in her Peotone home. She has taught piano for over thirty years. Many parents choose to have their child take piano lessons as an extra enrichment experience or to assist with special needs.

Parent Comments:

"My son is highly gifted but the incoming data gets "stuck" and causes him confusion and frustration, which quickly leads to anger. Learning to play the piano has helped him organize his thoughts and, I believe, made the door to his processing of data a little wider."

"When my daughter is having issues at home, practicing her piano often calms her down until she is able to approach a situation in a gentle manner."

"This is one activity that is constant in my son's life. His occupational therapist can't believe how much his impaired hand has opened up and his wrist is much stronger. Mrs. Wetzel has worked a program not only to teach him to learn how to play the piano but help him work on strengthening his right side as well as his posture."

"My child needed something to increase her attention span. Piano lessons helped her concentrate for longer periods of time."

"My son loves music. Piano lessons was a perfect fit."
